Suffrage March on Washington

March 3rd marks 100 years since suffragists marched on Washington. The "National Policy of Nagging" Pinterest board, created by the National Archives, honors this anniversary. Suffragists faced a difficult road in their march towards equality. Even women opposed giving women the right to vote. One letter called it "an endorsement of nagging as a national policy."

Elizabeth Murray Project

“"I have acted many roles in my life..." A National Endowment for the Humanities and California State University resource site for early American History devoted to the fascinating figure Elizabeth Murray who became caught up in the midst of the Revolution. Torn by conflicting loyalties, she came to understand the political and personal dangers of the war only too well.

The National Woman Suffrage Parade, 1913

On March 3, 1913, 5,000 women marched up Pennsylvania Avenue demanding the right to vote. Their "national procession," staged the day before Woodrow Wilson’s presidential inauguration, was the first civil rights parade to use the nation’s capital as a backdrop.

Annie Leibovitz: Pilgrimage

Pilgrimage is an evocative and deeply personal statement by a photographer whose career now spans more than forty years, encompassing a broad range of subject matter, history, and stylistic influences. Unlike her staged and carefully lit portraits made on assignment for magazines and advertising clients, the photographs in this exhibition were taken simply because Leibovitz was moved by the subject.

Women at Work

Throughout American history, women have worked in the home, in the fields, and then in the factories with the advent of war. This collection was compiled by the United States National Archives and Records Administration, drawing from its nationwide holdings, and depicts the role of women in the workforce throughout our national life.

Flight to Freedom

Mission US is a multimedia project that immerses players in U.S. history content through free interactive games. In Mission 2: “Flight to Freedom,” players take on the role of Lucy, a 14-year-old slave in Kentucky. As they navigate her escape and journey to Ohio, they discover that life in the “free” North is dangerous and difficult. In 1850, the Fugitive Slave Act brings disaster. Will Lucy ever truly be free? (Funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and CPB)

HERSTORY EMERSON COLLEGE 2013

Student Life and the Office of Student Activities celebrates Women's HERstory Month each March by organizing and presenting several different events in honor of women's achievements.

If your campus organization or department would like to be a part of Women's HERstory Month 2013, please email EME@emerson.edu for inclusion in our celebration.

Last year, hundreds of Emerson students, faculty and staff celebrated the achievements and history of women through comedy, interactive media workshops and fitness programs. In 2013, we will continue that tradition with an informative and celebratory line-up of events. Past events have included theatrical workshops, athletic training workshops geared specifically for women, informative lectures, film screenings, and more.

Look for a full schedule of events to be listed in Spring 2013.

WOMEN PEACEMAKERS

Women PeaceMakers Program

The Women PeaceMakers Program documents the stories and best practices of international women leaders who are involved in human rights and peacemaking efforts in their home countries. Women on the frontlines of efforts to end violence and secure a just peace seldom record their experiences, activities and insights as generally there is no time, or, perhaps, no formal education that would help women record their work. The Women PeaceMakers Program offers an opportunity for women leaders who want to document, share and build upon their unique peacemaking stories.

In addition to documenting their stories, the women give presentations on their work both at the IPJ and in the San Diego community and have opportunities to exchange ideas and approaches to peacemaking and justice, increasing their capacity to participate in conflict resolution and peacebuilding efforts and in post-conflict decision-making. As one of the IPJ's flagship programs, the Women PeaceMakers Program seeks to project awardees as experts and advocates in gendered peacebuilding processes locally, regionally and internationally.
