What we believe to be the case, what we think should be the case, and what is actually the case.

My blog: The War Department and Peace Heroes

http://jamesrichardbennett.blogspot.com/

Newsletters:

http://www.omnicenter.org/newsletter-archive/

Index:

http://www.omnicenter.org/omni-newsletter-general-index/

See Class, Corporate Personhood, Corporations, Economics, Globalization, Go Not to Jail, Greed, Inequality, Information Control, Lobbying, Marx, Military Industrial Complex, Monopoly, Occupy, Rapacity, Regulation, Secrecy, Socialism, Too Big To Fail, US Economic Imperialism, Working Class, and related newsletters.

A Call to the People by George Monbiot:

From: Robert McAfee <robertjmca1@gmail.com>
Date: September 19, 2013, 5:36:29 AM CDT
To: Robert McAfee <robertjmca1@gmail.com>

After more than a quarter of a century of environmental campaigning I’ve come to see that the only thing that really works is public mobilisation: the electorate putting so much pressure on governments that they are obliged to take a stand against powerful interests. It doesn’t matter what weapons governments use to confront these interests: what counts is their willingness to use them. A system which undermines public involvement, boosts the power of the financial markets and reduces love and passion and delight to a column of figures is unlikely to enhance the protection of the natural world.

Nos. 9, 10, 11, 12 at end.
Contents #13
Dick, Moyers & Co.: Victims of US Capitalism in Milwaukee
Scheer, Predatory Takeover, The Great Stickup
Taibbi, Big Banks Price-Fixing
Dick, Warrior Capitalism
Taibbi, Everything Rigged
Leech, Capitalism Genocidal, Rev. by Sethness
Munoz, US Supreme Court Protects Corporations, MM Silent
Richard Wolff
Kroll, 2012 Elections and Billionaires
Remedies
Gibson, Public Banking

Contents #14
USA:
Leibovich: US Capitalism Washington, DC,
Cox: The Market as God
Moyers: Freeland, Taibbi, Income Inequality
Birdsell: Poverty of Working Poor
Ockert: SNAP Handouts Help Short-term
GLOBAL
Hedges: Global US Capitalism, World’s Elites vs. World’s Poor
Trainor: And Climate Change, 180 Degree Turn Needed Now
Bennett: Chomsky, Bolivia (long-term gains) vs. US (short-term)
Faulkner: Over-accumulation of Capitalism:
Defenders of a Modified Capitalism
Admati and Hellwig: Changing the Banking System
Haque: Changing the Economic System
Strong and Mackey: Conscious Capitalists Can Solve World’s Problems
Welch: Positive Vision Needed

Contents #15 Nov. 22, 2013 (11 essays)
DEREGULATION/MONEY COUP AND DESTRUCTION OF DEMOCRACY
Frontline, JPMorgan Fined $13 Billion, the Price of Business as Usual
Hedges (2 essays on disintegrating Corporate State)
Moyers & Company: Interview of Heather Gerken and Joyce Appleby
Moyers & Co., Interview of Gretchen Morgenson, Author of Reckless Endangerment
Nichols and McCchesney, Dollarocracy
Gotesdiener, A Dream Foreclosed: Black America and the Fight for a Place to Call Home
NEW SUSTAINABLE, ECONOMICALLY JUST, DEMOCRATIC SYSTEM
Senator Sanders, Morally and Economically Sound Budget
Speth, Manifesto for a New Economy
Appleby, Libertarian View of Flexible Capitalism
Brown, Costa Rican (and North Dakotan!) Public Banking

Contents #16,
US “Free”-Market, Unregulated Greed
Parramore, Ayn Rand
Video Documentary, Frontline, “To Catch a Trader”
Dick: Jackson’s Study of Media Reporting of Unequal Justice
Michael Klare: Carbon Dioxide Increasing

Building a New Economic System
Pierce, Economic Bill of Rights Needed vs. Corporations
Chomsky, An Economic System for the Common Good
Weissmann, A Different Federal Reserve
Hedges, Public Banks, the North Dakota Model
Bradbery, Adequate Regulatory Oversight
Stephenson and Miodema, Volker Rule One Step
The People’s Ally, Public Citizen
Staggenborg, Pledge to Amend, Anti-Corruption Act Petition

US “FREE”-MARKET, UNREGULATED CAPITALISM

Ayn Rand Destroys CEO’s Empire
Parramore writes: "Lampert created a business model predicated on the notion that the invisible hand of the market would magically drive stellar results. With his belief in economic fairy tales, he managed to kill the goose that laid his own golden egg."
Google search, PBS, Frontline, Martin Smith, “To Catch a Trader” Documentary, Jan. 6, 2014, Page One

1. Video: "To Catch a Trader" Preview | Watch ... - PBS Video video.pbs.org/video/2365136973
   Frontline correspondent Martin Smith goes inside the dramatic hunt that uncovered the biggest insider trading scandal in U.S. history, drawing on ...

2. To Catch a Trader | FRONTLINE | PBS
   www.pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/to-catch-a-trader/
   To Catch a Trader ... In a never-before-published video, hedge fund titan Steven A. Cohen, whose firm this week pleaded guilty to securities fraud, describes ...

3. Video: "To Catch a Trader" Preview | Watch FRONTLINE ... - KERA
   www.kera.org/index.php?banner_id=861
   Jan 7, 2014 - Frontline correspondent Martin Smith goes inside the dramatic hunt that uncovered the biggest insider trading scandal in U.S. history, ...

4. Frontline To Catch A Trader | WTTW Chicago - Daily Schedule
   schedule.wttw.com/episodes/281564/Frontline/To-Catch-A-Trader/
   From small-time options trader to King of Wall Street hedge fund managers, ... SAC Capital, and other Wall Street characters with never-before-seen video and ...

5. "To Catch a Trader" PBS Frontline Video Preview, Jan 7th, 2014 ... www.stockjocknroll.com/pbs7jan/
   3 days ago - Frontline Coming January 7th – correspondent Martin Smith goes inside the dramatic hunt that uncovered the biggest insider trading ...

6. "To Catch a Trader" Preview | Watch Frontline PBS Full Episodes ... www.thirteen.org/programs/.../to-catch-a-trader-previe...
   Dec 12, 2013
   ... scandal in U.S. history, drawing on exclusively-obtained video of hedge fund titan Steven A. Cohen ...

7. To Catch A Trader | Frontline | Wisconsin Public Television
   wptschedule.org/episodes/44839735/Frontline/To-Catch-A-Trader/
   To Catch A Trader. Billionaire Steven A. Cohen and the largest insider trading scandal in U.S. history ... Series Links. Visit Frontline website. Searching for Video ...
Why Aren’t Big Bankers in Jail?

“The man in charge of a bank that engaged in massive mortgage fraud [Jamie Dimon] chatted with a corporate media host (CNBC Squawk on the Street, 7/12/13) about the fact that virtually none of those who enriched themselves while eviscerating the life savings of many blameless people, derailing the US economy along the way, have faced criminal prosecution: Jim Cramer: Shouldn't they have indicted somebody who actually did bad things in banking? JPMorgan Chase CEO Jamie Dimon: I think if someone did something wrong, they should go to jail. Cramer: Well, who did? Who went to jail? Dimon: One of the great things about America, failure is not illegal or wrong.”

Jackson gives an excellent analysis of corporate media response to the question, especially their deflection of blame by diffusion of the guilty. For example, the public is to blame for believing in the bubble. But a multitude of frauds were committed, and they will continue until the plutocratic malefactors are punished. But worse, the stench of unequal justice in the US will eventually stifle the truth and poison hope. For example, in a brief attached note, “An Unarrestable Class?”, the ACLU reported on 3,278 people—mostly black, many poor, mentally ill, on drugs—who are in prison for “failure,” for example for carrying drugs for an abusive boyfriend or possessing a crack pipe. --Dick
Michael T. Klare | Peak Oil Is Dead, Long Live Peak Oil!
Michael T. Klare, TomDispatch, 09 January 14 PM, Reader Supported News

Klare writes: "As the year begins, we know more about what's in our future with somewhat greater certainty and, generally speaking, as record amounts of carbon dioxide continue to pour into the atmosphere, we're doing remarkably little about it."

READ MORE

Building a New Economic System

WE NEED A BILL OF RIGHTS THAT PROTECTS THE PEOPLE NOT ONLY FROM THE GOVERNMENT BUT FROM THE CORPORATIONS
[The UN’s Universal Declaration of Human Rights helps, but The Earth Charter is better. –Dick]

The Tyranny of the Brand
By Charles Pierce, Esquire 20 December 13

What good is a Bill of Rights if it protects us (increasingly thinly) against government, but subcontracts the job of abridging those rights to every other institution that affects our lives and well-being?

The day went on, I heard an unfortunate number of progressive friends address the issue of the suspension of the crackefamilias with the flat assertion that the First Amendment doesn't apply to corporations and that therefore, A&E was within its rights to suspend the guy. (Which, as Steve M. points out, isn't really a suspension but rather that the crackefamilias is sort of banned from A&E world HQ while his program is on hiatus, which many of the show's fans likely believe is a form of hernia.) I do not deny the basic legal correctness of this point, but I do wonder if progressives should be quite so blithe about it.
The Bill Of Rights is supposed to be durable and universal. Now, though, in our schools and in our workplaces, it has taken a severe beating. Regularly scheduled drug testing without cause eviscerates the protections of the Fourth And Fifth Amendments. Just this week, Senator Professor Warren proposed a bill that would decouple credit checks from the application process, which at least is a step toward reasserting a right to privacy. To say that, well, Phil Robertson doesn't have a First Amendment right to a TV show is only to make half an argument. What good is a Bill of Rights if it protects us (increasingly thinly) against government, but subcontracts the job of abridging those rights to every other institution that affects our lives and well-being? As it happens, I had disciplinary action taken against me at the last newspaper I worked for because of things I had written on the Esquire.com Politics blog prior to coming to work here full time. When I asked my immediate supervisor why this happened, he replied, "My primary obligation is to the company." (I looked down to make sure I wasn't wearing a nametag with the word Wal Mart on it.) If I showed you the official letter of reprimand, you wouldn't believe that it actually was written by anyone who worked for a newspaper in any capacity except hawking it from a steam grate. They were within their rights to do what they did, but if you believe in civil liberties, you have to start wondering how truncated those liberties are in daily life. And my favorite left-wing left-winger passes along another story from within this rapidly expanding gray area. According to the new policy, "improper use of social media" includes any "communication through social media that": "ii. when made pursuant to (i.e. in furtherance of) the employee's official duties, is contrary to the best interest of the university"; "iv. subject to the balancing analysis required by the following paragraph, impairs discipline by superiors or harmony among co-workers, has a detrimental impact on close working relationships for which personal loyalty and confidence are necessary, impedes the performance of the speaker's official duties, interferes with the regular operation of the university, or otherwise adversely affects the university's ability to efficiently provide services. "In determining whether the employee's communication constitutes an improper use of social media under paragraph (iv), the chief executive officer shall balance the interest of the university in promoting the efficiency of the public services it performs through its employees against the employee's right as a citizen to speak on matters of public concern, and may consider the employee's position within the university and whether the employee used or publicized the university name, brands, website, official title or school/department/college or otherwise created the appearance of the communication being endorsed, approved or connected to the university in a manner that discredits the university. The chief executive officer may also consider whether the communication was made during the employee's working hours or the communication was transmitted utilizing university systems or equipment. This policy on improper use of social media shall apply prospectively from its date of adoption by the Kansas Board of Regents.

Does your job own your civil liberties when you're off the clock? Does it own your thoughts, expressed freely, when you're home? Are we saying that the government can't abridge your constitutional rights, but that The Brand can? If you answer instantly, "yes," think again about what you're saying, and about the kind of country in which you want to live.

Noam Chomsky, How Can We Escape the Curse of Economic Exploitation?  Noam Chomsky, AlterNet, 09 January 14, Reader Supported News

Chomsky writes: "Concern for the common good should impel us to find ways to cultivate human development in its richest diversity."

READ MORE

Steve Weissman, Learning to Love the Federal Reserve.  Steve Weissman, Reader Supported News, 09 January 14,

Weissman writes: "At the risk of being tarred and feathered, let me suggest that a very different Federal Reserve could become an indispensable tool for extending politically conscious, democratic control to the nation's economy."
NEED FOR PUBLIC OVERSIGHT AND SAFEGUARDS

Standing Up to Corporate Power

April 3

By: Angela Bradbery

You’d think the financial crash in 2008 would have taught us some lessons. But apparently, we haven’t learned. Despite the fact that deregulation – which allowed the big banks and financial institutions to operate without oversight – contributed to the near collapse of the economy just a few years ago, we still haven’t instituted the safeguards needed to ensure it doesn’t happen again.

“Reality Check: The Forgotten Lessons of Deregulation and Unsung Successes of Sensible Safeguards,” a book released today at an event at Public Citizen, provides an in-depth look at how deregulation derailed the economy and puts forth a series of case studies that counter allegations made against public protections in recent years. The book is by our own Taylor Lincoln, research director of Public Citizen’s Congress Watch program.
Watch video of the discussion moderated by Public Citizen’s Taylor Lincoln (pictured) at the reception for the release of the new book, “Reality Check.”

“Four years ago, hardly anybody disputed that the housing bubble and financial crisis cried out for better regulation, but that lesson was soon forgotten,” said Lincoln. “We hope that our book will provoke a more thoughtful debate moving forward.”

“Reality Check” chronicles the damage caused by insufficient oversight of mortgage lending, financial derivatives, commodities and residential electricity services. The book illustrates that even the bailed-out mortgage buyers Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, which were often incorrectly portrayed as government agencies, succumbed because of a shortage of government oversight.

“Reality Check” also debunks myths that have flourished in recent years about how safeguards work.

Today’s symposium at our Washington, D.C., headquarters featured a discussion with Neil Barofsky, a federal prosecutor who was chosen to serve as the special inspector general overseeing the $700 billion Troubled Asset Relief Program; Brooksley Born, former chairperson of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission; and former U.S. Rep. Brad Miller (D-N.C.), who was instrumental in creating the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. (You can watch a video of the event here.)

The discussion was lively and fascinating, and the speakers were surprisingly candid about the challenges of crusading against powerful Wall Street interests. For instance, Barofsky recounted how he was told that it wouldn’t be in the best interest of his long-term career to be too hard on the banks. The solution Barofsky and others advocate: breaking up the big banks.

Contrary to claims that new rules are written by civil servants with little oversight, the book provides case studies illustrating that federal agencies are among the most regulated entities in the United States. Agency obligations have slowed the rulemaking process to a crawl.

For instance, the book recounts a 12-year saga surrounding the effort to complete a much-needed and uncontroversial update to a rule on the operation of cranes. More broadly, the book documents that delays in completing workplace rules concerning well-understood hazards have resulted in tens of thousands of avoidable illnesses and injuries.

Members of Congress often accuse agencies of handing down rules willy-nilly without oversight. But the rulemaking process has become so cumbersome that agencies fail to meet deadlines set by Congress nearly 80 percent of the time.

Meanwhile, the allegations surrounding public safeguards have kept many in the public arena from understanding that such rules tend to be well-crafted. A series of case studies in the book shows that regulations have a remarkable track record of success. Not only do rules tend to exceed their public protection objectives, they often do so at a fraction of predicted costs and to the benefit of industries that earlier fought mightily to stop them.

Finally, the book revisits the oft-recited trope that regulations are responsible for “killing jobs.” Numerous studies have found that new public safeguards have a beneficial effect on employment. Meanwhile, surveys have consistently found that small businesses rate regulations low on their list of concerns when contemplating whether to hire new employees.

Chris Hedges

Overthrow the Speculators

>From TRUTHDIG Posted on Dec 29, 2013

AP/Richard Drew

Traders work at the Goldman Sachs posts on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange in 2012.

By Chris Hedges

Money, as Karl Marx lamented, plays the largest part in determining the course of history. Once speculators are able to concentrate wealth into their hands they have, throughout history, emasculated government, turned the press into lap dogs and courtiers, corrupted the courts and hollowed out public institutions, including universities, to justify their looting and greed. Today’s speculators have created grotesque financial mechanisms, from usurious interest rates on loans to legalized accounting fraud, to plunge the masses into crippling forms of debt peonage. They steal staggering sums of public funds, such as the $85 billion of mortgage-backed securities and bonds, many of them toxic, that they unload each month on the Federal Reserve in return for cash. And when the public attempts to finance public-works projects they extract billions of dollars through wildly inflated interest rates.

Speculators at megabanks or investment firms such as Goldman Sachs are not, in a strict sense, capitalists. They do not make money from the means of production. Rather, they ignore or rewrite the law—ostensibly put in place to protect the vulnerable from the powerful—to steal from everyone, including their shareholders. They are parasites. They feed off the carcass of industrial capitalism. They produce nothing. They make nothing. They just manipulate money. Speculation in the 17th century was a crime. Speculators were hanged.

We can wrest back control of our economy, and finally our political system, from corporate speculators only by building local movements that decentralize economic power through the creation of hundreds of publicly owned state, county and city banks.

The establishment of city, regional and state banks, such as the state public bank in North Dakota, permits localities to invest money in community projects rather than hand it to speculators. It keeps property and sales taxes, along with payrolls for public employees and pension funds, from lining the pockets of speculators such as Jamie Dimon and Lloyd Blankfein. Money, instead of engorging the bank accounts of the few, is leveraged to fund schools, restore infrastructure, sustain systems of mass transit and develop energy self-reliance.

The Public Banking Institute, founded by Ellen Brown, the author of “Web of Debt: The Shocking Truth About Our Money System and How We Can Break Free,” Marc Armstrong and other grass-roots activists are attempting to build a system of public banks. States such as Vermont and Washington and cities such as Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., San Francisco and Reading, Pa., have begun public banking initiatives. Public banks return economic power, and by extension political power, to the citizens. And because they are local they are possible. These and other grass-roots revolts, including sustainable agriculture, will be the brush fires that will, if they succeed, ignite the overthrow of the corporate state.

“The debate about public or private control of the monetary system has been going on for hundreds of years,” Armstrong, the executive director of the Public Banking Institute, said when I reached him by phone. “The American Revolution had everything to do with who controlled our economic destiny. The money supply is central to that control. North Dakota has proven that a state can use a public bank to further the economic interests of its people. North Dakota funds its own infrastructure and capital investment projects. It provides funding for commercial lending throughout the state. It develops the areas of its economy it wants to prioritize, areas that are often not funded by private banks.”

“When a public bank such as the bank in North Dakota funds infrastructure projects the interest costs, which [otherwise] are often 50 percent or more of a project, in essence fall to zero because the interest is returned to same people who own the bank and paid the interest in the first place,” said Armstrong, who previously worked for IBM Finance. “[Americans typically] hold labor costs under a microscope, but ... don’t hold interest costs under a microscope. North Dakota can offer commercial loans as low as 1 percent. Compare this with Wall Street banks that charge 14 or 15 percent. We can use bank credit, the tool Wall Street banks use to amass wealth and power, to empower ourselves.” And because credit, Armstrong notes, is the source for 97 percent of the nation’s money supply, this power would be huge.

The Bank of North Dakota, the vision of socialists from a century ago, has been in operation for 90 years. It offers the state’s farmers and businesses low interest rates on loans. After floods destroyed much of Grand Forks in 1997 the bank provided a six-month moratorium on mortgage payments and gave low-interest loans to the community to rebuild, a sharp contrast with the raw exploitation that marked the arrival of Wall Street bankers and speculators in Gulf Coast areas hit by Hurricane Katrina. Public banks in the United States, like the public banks in Germany, fund things such as solar power because it is good for communities rather than the portfolios of speculators.

---

SEC Votes to Adopt Volcker Rule to Ban Proprietary Trading
Emily Stephenson and Douwe Miedema, Reuters, Reader Supported News, Dec. 10, 2013
Stephenson and Miedema report: "U.S. regulators toughened key sections of the Volcker rule's crackdown on Wall Street's risky trades on Tuesday as they finalized one of the harshest reforms after the credit meltdown."

[But “harshest”? Harsh? Have any of the reforms been harsh? Even altogether have they been adequate to end the corruption and boom-bust fluctuations at the injurious heart of the market system? Other essays in this newsletter suggest not. –Dick]
Some bank regulation finally passed

http://www.occupydemocrats.com/volcker-rule-approvedwall-street-cries/

"On Tuesday, December 10, 2013, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) along with 4 other agencies passed the Volcker Rule, while a 5th agency has stated it will also pass the rule, but behind closed doors. The Volcker Rule is a huge win for President Obama in regards to financial reform, fundamentally changing the way banks on Wall Street operate and severely limit the relationship between commercial and investment banks.

More specifically, the new law separates investment banking, private equity and proprietary trading (hedge fund) sections of financial institutions from their consumer lending arms.

Kelly and Rick, Public Citizen via uark.edu

Dick,

What a year.

As 2013 draws to a close, now is a good time to reflect on the past twelve months of Public Citizen’s victories, struggles, milestones and achievements.

You — as an essential part of this inspiring project we call Public Citizen — play a major role in each and every one of our shared accomplishments. We can’t do what we do without you.

Curious what we did together in 2013?

For a glimpse, keep reading to see fourteen standout posts from Public Citizen’s blogs this year.

Want to make sure you don’t miss 2014’s posts?

Sign up to receive a weekly email highlighting the best in-depth research, incisive
Here are fourteen blog posts from 2013 to ring in 2014.

Please read, comment and share!

• January 10
  U.S. Chamber plays Chicken Little (again)
  Robert Weissman, president of Public Citizen

• February 28
  Occupy lawsuit seeks to hasten Volcker Rule implementation
  Bartlett Naylor, financial policy reform advocate for Public Citizen’s Congress Watch division

• March 1
  Reflections on the movement to stop the Keystone XL pipeline
  Julia Trigg Crawford, energy activist and volunteer with Public Citizen’s Texas office

• April 3
  New Public Citizen book, ‘Reality Check: The Forgotten Lessons of Deregulation and Unsung Successes of Sensible Safeguards,’ makes the case for regulations
  Angela Bradbery, communications director for Public Citizen

• June 3
  Obama’s covert trade deal
  Lori Wallach, director of Public Citizen’s Global Trade Watch division, and Ben Beachy, research director for Public Citizen’s Global Trade Watch division

• June 17
  The surprising answer from Google on its membership in the U.S. Chamber of Commerce
  Jake Parent, coordinator of Public Citizen’s U.S. Chamber Watch

• July 18
  Cordray confirmation as CFPB director another victory for Public Citizen’s consumer protection efforts
  Rick Claypool, online director for Public Citizen’s Congress Watch division

• July 22
  What the Prince of Cambridge can teach the United States about the benefits of a single payer health care system
  Dave Sterrett, health care counsel for Public Citizen’s Congress Watch division
• August 28
  Police break up Public Citizen press conference criticizing HHS for unethical study
  Sam Jewler, communications officer for Public Citizen’s U.S. Chamber Watch

• September 25
  Coalition of parents and safety groups sue DOT over stalled auto safety rule to protect children
  Scott Michelman, attorney for the Public Citizen Litigation Group

• October 29
  An energy consumer Bill of Rights is needed
  Tyson Slocum, director of Public Citizen’s Energy Program

• November 1
  On Capitol Hill, lawmakers and experts make the case for transparency
  Kelly Ngo, online advocacy organizer with Public Citizen’s Congress Watch division

• November 13
  151 House Democrats, bloc of GOP announce opposition to ‘Fast Track’ trade authority
  Ben Beachy, research director for Public Citizen’s Global Trade Watch Division

• December 18
  Mountain of evidence: Consumers, employees and even small businesses are losing right to sue
  Christine Hines, consumer and civil justice counsel for Public Citizen’s Congress Watch division

Make sure you don’t miss our blog posts in 2014.

Sign up to receive an email each week highlighting posts from Public Citizen’s blogs.

Thanks for all you do,

Rick Claypool and Kelly Ngo
Public Citizen’s Online Action Team

The future of the amendment movement is here
There is great news regarding the move to end corporate rule in the US and the world. As I mentioned in my last email, Rootstrikers and Demand Progress are calling to make support for an amendment to reform campaign finance and end corporate constitutional rights a campaign issue in the 2016 Presidential campaign.

This pledge strategy is essentially what Represent US has been pushing to get reform legislation passed by planning a campaign to call for pledges of support of congressional candidates for the Anti-Corruption Act.

Now RepresentUS has teamed up with Free Speech for People to launch a joint petition calling for BOTH the Act and an amendment. This is a significant breakthrough and the timing is fantastic! We are organizing in Oregon to make support for such an amendment a campaign issue in 2014 congressional elections. The idea is pretty much what was outlined in early 2012 as the Pledge to Amend campaign:

http://www.soldiersforpeaceinternational.org/p/pledge-to-amend-campaign.html

If we successfully build a movement in Oregon that mobilizes people to attend campaign events and make the issue prominent, I fully expect the strategy to be adopted by other groups working on the issue and go national in time to affect the 2012 elections.

Please help by signing and sharing this petition.

https://represent.us/action/united-against-corruption/

Rick
In solidarity for peace and justice,
Rick Staggenborg, MD
Board President, Take Back America for the People
Founder, Soldiers For Peace International Coos Bay, OR
Contents #9 Nov. 12, 2012
Hedrick Smith, Who Stole the American Dream?
To Schneiderman: Prosecute or Resign
Taibbi, Why Government Doesn’t Fight Wall Street
Barofsky, Bailout on TARP
Nader: Where Were the Whistleblowers?
Freeland, Plutocrats
Reich, Book on US Capitalism
Reich, Interviewed About US Capitalism
Survey: Confidence in Capitalism Declines
Wolf: Global Financial Fraud
Looking Back at Capitalist Greed, PBS: Remember the Triangle Fire

Contents #10
Ha-Joon Chang, About Capitalism
Gibney Video: *Park Avenue, 1% of 1%:
Hacker and Pierson: Winner-Take-All Politics
Bybee, War on Wages
Foster and McChesney, Monopoly-Finance Capital
Pollin, Full Employment
Wenz, Progressive Taxation
Mondiot, Unregulated Capitalism and Climate Change
Williams, Socialism

Contents #11
Taibbi, Lies about Bailout
Ad Busters on US Capitalism
Ad Busters on Canadian Capitalism
Moyers & Co. Programs
Richard Wolff’s Books
Jim Wallis, Serving the Common Good
Contents #12
Animated Film on Nature of Capitalism
Connaughton, Why Wall Street Always Wins
Moyers Interviews Sheila Bair and Richard Wolff March 22
Stagnation
Tunnel People and Economic Collapse
Dauvergne and Lister, Corporate Takeover of Sustainability
Smil, What We Have Taken from Nature
Blinder, Cause and Cure of Economic Crisis
Leopold, World of Top Hedge-Fund Managers
Garson, How the 99% Lives in the Recession

END US CAPITALISM NEWSLETTER #16

--
Dick Bennett

Newsletters
http://www.omnicenter.org/newsletter-archive/

Index:
http://www.omnicenter.org/omni-newsletter-general-index/
jbennet@uark.edu

Blog
http://jamesrichardbennett.blogspot.com/

j.dick.bennett@gmail.com
(479) 442-4600
2582 Jimmie Ave.
Fayetteville, AR 72703