Nonviolent Struggle in Syria:
Why It Still Matters

Saturday Feb 28
6:00 pm at OMNI Center
Dr. Mohja Khaf, Syrian American and professor of English at UA

It could all have been so different. A nonviolent uprising started Syria on a path to democracy that has been derailed by political intrigue at multiple levels. Dr. Khaf will talk about the nonviolent movement that her family has been a significant part of. Her passionate but careful assessment will clarify many of the issues before the country right now, and provide a nuanced perspective that is totally absent in the news.
