Syria: Complex tidal wave of tragedy

Rescheduled:

Nonviolent Struggle in Syria: Why It Still Matters

Saturday March 14
2:00 pm at OMNI Center
Dr. Mohja Khaf, Syrian American and professor of English at UA

It could all have been so different. A nonviolent uprising started Syria on a path to democracy that has been derailed by political intrigue at multiple levels. Dr. Khaf will talk about the nonviolent movement that her family has been a significant part of. Her passionate but careful assessment will clarify many of the issues before the country right now, and provide a nuanced perspective that is totally absent in the news.
